

If interested in non-profit organizations, you can find valuable information at a number of key web sites. Also, check the date of the upcoming Non-Profit career fair so you can attend.

Researching a Non-Profit Organization

- Guidestar provides a searchable directory of non-profit organizations (www.guidestar.org).
- The Internet Non-Profit Center provides a library of information about non-profit organizations, a searchable directory of organizations, discussion forums, and links to other Web sites of interest (www.nonprofits.org).
- The Literature of the Non-profit Sector offers a searchable database of philanthropic literature (<http://fdncenter.org/onlib/inps>).
- The Better Business Bureau's Philanthropic Advisory Service reports on major charitable organizations. Reports include an overview of the organization, program information, financial data, ratings on compliance with CBBB Standards for Charitable Solicitation, and governance information (www.bbb.org).
- The National Center for Charitable Statistics collects statistics on non-profit organizations (<http://nccs.urban.org>).
- About provides links to a large number of web sites related to non-profit organizations (www.about.com).
